Spielberger-Ash.

The Palestine (Texas) Daily Visitor has an interesting account of a wedding which is of interest to the society of the Decaturs. Besides the groom, his mother and sister and Benj. Spielberger were present at the event. Mr. Benj. Spielberger being the best man. Many visitors from Texas, friends of the young people, were present including the governor of the State besides several prominent families from New Orleans.

For want of space we could not print the whole account although we would like to do so.

The most interesting extracts from a two-column account of the wedding are as follows:

Married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Henry Ash, in Palestine, Texas, on Wednesday, January 9, 1907, at 6 o'clock p.m., Mr. Henry Spielberger to Miss Pauline Ash, Rabbi Cohen, of Galveston, officiating.

There have been many marriages recently and some most beautiful occasions, for marriages seem always delightful, but none that we have attended have been so absolutely perfect in every arrangement and detail as was the wedding of this beloved daughter of Palestine to her heart's choice last night.

The bride wore a robe of real lace over white liberty satin, the bodice trimmed with bonds of satin. A girdle of satin was fastened in the back with a pearl buckle. A white net veil completely enveloped her, and fell over her face; she carried a tiny bible, bound in white with long markers of white ribbonf tied with white rosebuds in knots here and there.

Mrs. Spielberger, mother of the bridegroom, in handsome black lace, and Miss Spielberger, her daughter, in a lovely white white gown, and behind them the bride groom and his brother, Mr. Ben Spielberger as best man.

A very large number of guests attended the reception, and the magnificent toilets of ladies were never surpassed in Palestine. The wedding presents filled two sides of a large room—the silver, gold, cut glass and bric-a-brac were fit gifts for a queen.

The newly married couple took the train last night for the eastern cities and will be at home in New Decatur, Ala.
