IN THE COURTS.

Upon application of Eunice Person, Judge Pendleton, of the superior court, yesterday enjoined temporarily R. R. Jackson from inerfering in any way with the wages the complainant earns from the railroad for which he is working. The petition for injunction against the defendant, drawn by Lowndes Calhoun, attorney for the petitioner, recites that R. R. Jackson is a financier, located at 89 1-2 Decatur street. It is then said that the complainant, Person, on October 26 last borrowed money for which he gave a salary assignment. The petition concludes with a request that Jackson, the defendant, be denied the right to in any way interfere with the money the complainant, Person, may have earned or may earn from his employers until the issue joined can be adjudicated by the courts, the complainant setting up a plea of usury. Judge Pendleton, in granting the prayer presented by Judge Calhoun, named December 2 for a hearing.

Seeks a Divorce.

Mrs. Emma Kissel Saturday presented to the courts a petition for a divorce from Henry Kissel. They were married on March 9, 1905, in Atlanta. The plaintiff alleges harsh treatment. She asks for alimony. The court is asked to issue an order enjoining the Neal bank from paying money to Henry Kissel. Judge Pendleton designated December 2 for the hearing.

Alleges False Arrest.

R. M. Massell Saturday filed suit against W. B. Spielberger for $5,000 damages, asserting that he was humiliated by being placed under arrest as a result of charges made against him by the defendant. The arrest, it is alleged, injured the character and reputation of the plaintiff.

Sues for Profits.

William Oldknow, third ward member of the general council, Saturday began suit against the Southern Cash Register Company, managed in Atlanta by A. L. Delkin and F. E. Ladd, for $283.50. Plaintiff Oldknow alleges that he had a contract with the defendants by which he was "working on one-half the gross profits." He alleges an amount of total sales and shows the "factory price" of the same output. The petition concludes with a demand for the sum he, the plaintiff, asserts is due him.

Injured by Mule Team.

Because he was struck by a mule team, said to be the property of Marsh Schenck and the Calhoun Brick Company, on Decatur street, last July, G. H. Holmes has brought suit against the parties indicated for $5,000.

Put Off Street Car.

John Short, in suit for $1,200, filed by his attorney with the clerk of the superior court Saturday asserts that on November 21 he boarded a car of the Georgia Railway and Electric Company and paid his fare. Subsequently, so his declaration reads, the conductor called upon him for the price of the ride, and when the passenger declared that he had paid one time a controversy arose. The controversy became a quarrel, and that quarrel resulted in the passenger's ejectment, as the declaration has it, from the car.
